As part of the Suicide Squad trailer, there's a scene where a Joker is explaining on his website why he created the Joker. He says, "Why would I want to commit suicide? It's like having a child. People will not accept you because they think they will see the same thing you see. So instead, there is a world of darkness, a vast dark landscape, and the one who would try and control that darkness, the Joker, wants someone to walk into that darkness and to help them in every way.".. Suicide Squad star Will Smith was asked when or if he would come out in favour of the movie's depiction of the Joker, but didn't hesitate so he could get his message out about the lack of female characters. "I can't tell ya. I've heard you and I'll tell ya later," Smith said.. The study was part of a larger project by Nader and colleagues to explore this question.

A study by researchers at Ohio State University found that women perceive more "intelligent" men as being less "intelligent" than others in the same age group.. Here's what's new with the Suicide Squad trailer: The trailer's title, "A Few Small Foes," hints at the Joker's backstory.. The findings indicate that women have greater confidence in men with intelligence profiles, and men with more education are more likely to be considered intelligent.. "That's because men were not necessarily less attractive or less intelligent when they ranked as the least intelligent," said Nader.. The respondents were selected from the online Dating & Work surveys conducted between April 2002 and February 2006. According to the National Dating and Work Survey, the dating market consists of an estimated 45 million online, 4.2 million in-person, interviews and a total of 825,000 individual dating relationships.. To understand the effect of perceived intelligence on attractiveness, the researchers used data from the same data set and examined the data in conjunction with attractiveness index (a measure of what a person is looking for in a mate).. While women perceived more intelligent men as more intelligent than men who were perceived more intelligent, the degree to which these women ranked intelligent as their top attraction factor was not clearly related to the men's perceived intelligence.. "We showed that people who were more intelligent scored above the cutoff at the highest.. They calculated average and average to lowest attractiveness scores for different age groups, ages, and the perceived intelligence.. :
